

Contacts

The GMAT project maintains several methods of communication:

Mailing Lists

All of our mailing lists are public, and all interested users are invited to subscribe:

- gmat-info: A low-volume (5/year) read-only list for release announcements and other important messages. Archives: SourceForge, Google
- gmat-users: A low-volume (5/year) list for end-user discussion and support. Archives: SourceForge, Google, Nabble
- gmat-developers: A low-volume (1/month) list for developers and contributors. Archives: SourceForge, GMANE, Mail Archive, Nabble
- gmat-betatest: A low-volume list for GMAT beta testers. Archives: SourceForge, Nabble
- gmat-buildtest: A medium-volume (2/day) read-only list for build and test results. Archives: SourceForge, Nabble
- gmat-svn: A high-volume (10/day) read-only list for SVN commit messages. Archives: SourceForge, GMANE, Mail Archive, Nabble

Forums

The GMAT Forums are available for user discussion and support.

Blogs

We run two blogs:

- The GMAT Blog features items of interest to end users, such as feature updates and release information. (feed)
- The GMAT Plugins and Extensions Blog features items of interest to developers, such as build instructions and development tips.
